This house is built on a “field” – not a building plot. Therefore, although it is in the heart of a village, it cannot be knocked down and rebuilt. It can only be renovated to keep the structure. The reason is that in the 70’s and 80’s, you were given a building permit to build in a field but today you cannot get such a building permit. You can get a building permit to build a brand new house if you transform your field to a plot. That means splitting the field it, making pavements, access points, etc. which makes your land smaller. Keeping it as a field, you have a great garden in the back where you can build your swimming pool, recreational areas, workshops, etc. The house is si...
